SCHOOL REPORT.

The school year just closed has been as a whole very satisfactory. The progress made by the pupils compares favorably with last year. The school board was fortunate in securing the services of some of the former teachers, and the schools to which they were assigned have made a marked progress. The register shows a decrease in the whole number registered for the year, but the average attendance is about the same.

It is only a few pupils who have the black marks against their names. It is unnecessary to inquire who they are. You can tell them, in school by their stupid blunders when called upon to recite, and out of school by their listless, careless manner. This non-attendance on the part of a few pupils is the most unsatisfactory feature of the past year's work. But how can it be stopped? It is impossible for the school board to know of every instance unless it be reported to them. I would impress it upon the minds of every parent to enforce regularity of attendance. Our common schools are the "people's college" from which ninety per cent of our children receive their education, therefore it is our duty to work together to raise them to a higher standard. It is incumbent upon parents to see that their children attend every school session, unless detained by illness, so that the school funds may not be wasted through irregular attendance and classes held back on account of tardy and straggling pupils. Illness has affected the attendance in some schools more than others, as is liable to occur any year.

Most of our teachers seem awake to the importance of teaching their pupils that kind of study which tends rather to develop and discipline the mind than to enlarge the memory alone. I feel quite sure this is the only correct one. No other will lead to so wide a sphere of study or so sure a path of usefulness. That mind which can grasp at, appreciate, reason upon, and master a new and difficult subject is far in advance of the one who has cultivated memory alone. The art of teaching the pupil to reason on each subject that occurs is the only correct way to effect this. The teacher who is anxious to cover the greatest amount of study in the allotted time—thereby crowding too much—makes a great mistake. They should insist on thoroughness and allow the pupils to advance only as they prove proficient in what they have passed through. It is not the number of pages in the text book he has been over that determine the educational progress which he has made, but it is how well he has done it, and how much real mental discipline he has received from the effort. It would be well if teachers become thoroughly imbued with this idea of education. I am confident that a partial grading of our schools would be attended with success. No teacher can do justice to herself or her pupils who is obliged to rush through her recitations and has no time for explaining or illustrating the work. The Depot school labored under this disadvantage the past year. There were too many classes, thereby making them few in number; such classes lose the stimulus of competition with others which arouses the mind to increased activity and gives more rapid advancement. I think it the duty of the school board to cut down the number of classes in the ungraded schools, thereby making it possible for the teacher to give each the attention they need.

A systematic plan of school work judiciously laid out and followed is of the first importance to the success of the schools.

During the past year we have maintained six schools of thirty weeks each—except where noted in the statistical table. The custom of visiting schools by the parents and others (perhaps we should say mothers and others, for we seldom meet the fathers there) is helpful to both teacher and pupil. I think those schools have less absent and tardy marks, and make more real progress. We earnestly hope there will be an increase in those visits the coming year. Do not wait for the last day of school but go frequently during the terms.

We have continued giving roll of honor badges during the past year. There has been an increase in the number of annual badges given, but a decrease in the number of term badges, owing I feel sure to the inclemency of the weather during the last two weeks of the winter term. In closing this report allow me to extend thanks to those who have kindly interested themselves in the schools the past year.
